Central Coast Regional Climate Symposium

UC Santa Cruz Alumni Room | Santa Cruz, CA

Join leading climate researchers and scientists, key state agencies, local jurisdictions, and community leaders for the Central Coast Regional Climate Symposium to learn about key findings from California’s Fourth Climate Change Assessment and opportunities to advance local adaptation initiatives!

This workshop will highlight new findings on key climate risks impacting the Central Coast region with a special emphasis on oceans and coasts, energy systems, water, agriculture, and ecosystems. Participants will also learn about financing mechanisms, funding opportunities, key tools and resources while also engaging in interactive discussions to inform the update to the State’s Adaptation Planning Guide.

This workshop is open to the public. We strongly encourage public agency staff (cities, counties, regional agencies, special districts, etc.), non-profit organizations, community-based organizations, private consulting firms, advocacy groups, students, and individuals interested in learning about the latest climate science to attend this engaging and informative event.
